

Additional Information

For many years I have lived, worked and invested in Western Australia, building businesses, creating jobs and supporting local communities. I understand the challenges faced by families, seniors, young people, volunteers and small businesses because I have experienced many of the same challenges myself.

As a former Shire of Kojonup Councillor (2019-2023), I learnt that the best decisions are made by listening to residents, respecting different opinions and focusing on practical solutions. I believe councillors should be visible, approachable and accountable. The community deserves representatives who listen first, communicate openly and explain the reasons behind their decisions.

Mandurah is a fantastic place to live, work and raise a family. However, as our city continues to grow, we must plan wisely for the future. We need responsible financial management, well-maintained roads and public spaces, support for local businesses, sensible planning, improved housing opportunities and quality community facilities that meet the needs of residents today and for future generations.

I strongly support local sporting clubs, volunteers, community organisations and initiatives that bring people together. A strong community is built through participation, respect and cooperation. I also believe council should work closely with State and Federal governments to attract investment, improve infrastructure and create opportunities that benefit Mandurah.

My promise is simple. I will always be available to listen, treat everyone with respect, consider every issue on its merits and make decisions based on what is best for the community. I will work hard, ask questions, be transparent and ensure ratepayers receive value for every dollar spent. Together, we can build a stronger, safer, more connected and more prosperous Mandurah for everyone.
