As a 50+ year lifetime local, Brenden offers a deep connection to the Mandurah community. Mandurah deserves a councillor who brings practical experience, process-driven capability, and real accountability to local government.

Backed by over 30 years in mechanical trades and the mining sector, Brenden brings an analytical, problem-solving approach to local governance. His background means he understands budgets, risk management, and project management skills essential to getting the core basics right for the community. Additionally, three years of traveling Europe provided valuable perspective on how diverse communities successfully manage growth and infrastructure.

Through years of active involvement in community life and karate, Brenden has developed the tenacity, discipline, respect, and responsibility needed to effectively represent local residents. He is committed to avoiding political games; instead, he will work the process methodically, hold the line, and remain entirely focused on delivering outcomes for the community.

Brenden is not new to advocating for the public. Having previously run in Federal and State elections for regional electorates, he has a proven track record of endurance and standing up firmly against bad policy. These experiences taught him that the most effective tool to protect a community is a legally grounded, methodical challenge to flawed processes, cutting through political noise to protect local interests.

Mandurah deserves a council dedicated to essential services as the priority. A keen eye should be focused on preventing council overreach or financial waste. When it comes to major landmarks like the Western Foreshore, the council's role must be to regulate development responsibly and make decisions in the best interest of the community. Ultimately, local zoning must be respected, and precious public open space must be protected for everyone to enjoy.
